Retaining facts and information is only a small part of a literary training. The main aim of the Faculty's work is to encourage imaginative and critical habits of mind, rather than to provide students with information. Computers, however, are not very good at testing imagination, since they have none themselves. Literary quiz is meant to be fun, and to help test whether the students have grasped some of the concepts which the classroom may have passed on to them.

- Learning Outcome:

Students learned to place in the right attitude for learning.

Students learned to feel more confident to discuss the material.
